IKEA Round Rock is about to get even bigger.

The retailer announced plans today to expand the store, which opened in 2006, by 54,000 square feet.

A three-level parking garage will also be added to offset spaces lost as the building's size increases.

After work is completed in summer 2012, IKEA Round Rock will span 306,000 square feet, up from its current 252,000 square feet.

The store will remain open while construction is under way, the company said.

Plans call for the self-serve furniture and "as-is" sections to grow. The warehouse will be enlarged, and additional registers will be added. Many other departments will be relocated.
